SHORT TALKS BY L. T. COOPER.
NERVOUSNESS.

Nervousness makes people miserable, blue, and unhappy. They think something terrible is going to happen. At night
they toss and worry
and are not rested.
They tire easily and
haven't much energy. They think
many things are the
matter with them—
Consumption, Kidney trouble, or
twenty other diseases. It's just
stomach trouble,
nothing else in the world. Two bottles of Cooper's New Discovery will put the stomach in shape in three weeks. I know this because I've seen it tried a thousand times. And all nervousness will disappear. I know this too, because I've seen it happen a thousand times. Here's a letter I got the other day:

"My system was badly run down and
my stomach and nerves in a awful shape.
I could not digest my food, was always tired and would often feel faint and dizzy."
"I had heard so much of your New Discovery medicine that I began taking it.
Relief and strength and happiness were found in the very first bottle and the benefit I have received from it has been truly wonderful. I am no longer nervous, my appetite and digestion are good and I eat everything and sleep well." Mrs. W. J.
Schauer, 220 Guthrie St., Louisville, Ky.

We sell Cooper's New Discovery. It makes tired, worn out, nervous people happy.

E. D. WILLIAMS, Observer.

The Misses Clarissa and Bessie A. Williams left for Mattituck, Long Island, N. Y., last week. They will remain there until fall when they will go to New York City, there to remain until December when they expect to return to Crescent City.

Mrs. Mary Scott Miller has sent to a few of the more intimate friends of her late husband, Capt. J. W. Miller, a beautiful memorial book-let which all will appreciate. The work was executed by Capt. Miller's brother, who is proprietor of a modern printing establishment at Des Moines, Iowa, and it is the regret of Mrs. Miller that she did not have a sufficient number of these booklets to furnish each and all of Capt. Miller's old friends a copy. The little booklet contains a most excellent picture of Capt. Miller, taken just before his illness. The balance is made up of a photograph reproduction of the account of his death and funeral, together with editorial and contributed tributes to his memory which appeared in the Palatka News. The chief value of this memorial booklet consists of the excellent likeness therein presented of the man who, perhaps more than any single individual hereabouts in life, possessed the love and esteem of his fellow citizens.

A Wonderful Creature.

The polyp is the most remarkable creature on earth. If cut transversely or longitudinally into several parts, each will become a perfect animal. Tremblingly turned them inside out and they ate and enjoyed themselves as much as ever. He slit two longitudinally, placed the halves together and united them into two animals. He divided two transversely and created one with two heads. He pushed one down the throat of another, a third down the throat of the second, and thus formed a creature with three heads.

Paternal Duties.
Modern life with its haste and hustle leaves too little time for the joys of fatherhood. One father comes home late from business, tired and peevish, and cannot devote much time to his children, even if he would. Another has had enough of the cares and worries of the day and seeks dissipation outside the home. Yet fathers can give their children something better than money; they can give themselves—Deutsche Monatschrift.

A Little Mixed.

Sportsman—I wonder what's become of Mike? I told him to meet me here. Driver—Ach, 'tis no use tellin' him anything! Shure, sorr, it's just gone in at war and out at the other, like water off a duck's back!—London Tit-Bits.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.
Plump cheeks, flushed with the soft glow of health and a pure complexion, make all woman beautiful. Take a small dose of Herbine after each meal; it will prevent constipation and help digest what you have eaten. Mrs. Wm. M. Stroud, Middlethorpe, Tex. writes, May 31, 1907:
"We have used Herbine in our family for eight years, and found it the best medicine we ever used for constipation, bilious fever and malaria. Sold by Ackerman-Stewart Drug Co."

Mirrors as Detectives.
"It is not solely to please the lady patrons," said an interior decorator, "that mirrors so abound in shops. They serve another and more important purpose. They help detect shoplifters. If you should study the various watchers in the employ of big retail stores you would find that they don't watch the patrons directly. They look at their reflections in the mirrors. Of course their watching done that way is unperceived. The shoplifter glances at the watcher, sees that his back is to her and secretes a pair of silk stockings in her shirt waist. The next moment she feels an unfriendly and terrifying tap on her shoulder, and the watcher, who has caught her by the mirror's aid, bids her sternly to accompany him to the office."—New York Press.

A RETURN OF LOVE LETTERS.

(Original.)

The average number of letters passing between Seldon Reburn and his fiancée, May Hildreth, was ten a week. In eighteen months the aggregate weight of these letters was forty pounds. The couple were desperately in love, and the letters were written in glowing terms that he had met hundreds of girls without being in the least influenced by them. It was only when thrown in with one who was the soul of honor, a model of amiability, an angel in the flesh, that he had succumbed. Miss Hildreth declared that she could love no one less than a nobleman of nature, and her dearest Seldon was one of nature's kings. She felt that her happiness was as safe in his hands as if he had come down from heaven to assume its care.

They quarreled. It would be impossible to state the cause, for, since neither of them remembered it, no one else could be expected to know it. Confidence having been destroyed, the id each had set up was at once shattered.

"Suppose," remarked Mr. Reburn to himself, "that she should sue me for breach of promise and produce my letters to be read in court." "I have no doubt," mused Miss Hildreth, "that such a man would show my letters at his club."

Mr. Reburn wrote her a cold, cutting note, saying that he supposed she would want her letters returned. This was with a view to securing his own.

"If you had been a gentleman," replied Miss Hildreth, "you would have returned them instantly."

"I supposed you would have first returned mine," he wrote. "It is the lady's privilege to break finally and forever with a gentleman. Then I would have returned yours."

"Send me my letters at once," she wrote. "One who has acted as dis-honorably as you would not scruple to read them to others. I have no doubt they have already gone the rounds of your friends."

There was silence for a time after this. Reburn was thunderstruck that a woman he had loved would stoop to make such a charge and was well satisfied to have broken with her, but he felt all the more anxious to get his letters. A girl who would make such an accusation would not herself hesitate to show letters that had been written her, so he reopened the question of exchange and proposed sending the packages by express. Miss Hildreth at first assented, but on inquiring the cost found that she could buy considerable candy with the money required. She wrote Reburn that the letters might be lost. Then he suggested a mutual friend. Miss Hildreth feared that the friend might read the letters, but if he would consent that one of her own sex should be the bearer she would agree to his plan. "No, thanks," he wrote. "My experience with women would not justify any such procedure."

"And I have discovered that men are too dishonorable for anything," she replied.

Then it was arranged that on a certain night each should hide a package in a hollow tree just outside the wall surrounding her home, and each was to take the package the other had left. Both stood off and watched for the other to make the first deposit, and the scheme fell through.

"I knew I couldn't trust you," she wrote.

"A pretty scheme to get all and give nothing," he replied.

By this time Reburn felt sure the girl was keeping his letters for a purpose. Every time he thought of their extravagant phrases being perused by others or printed in the newspapers he became panic stricken. He resolved to secure them at any cost. Then it occurred to him to take her letters to her himself and receive his own from her hands. He wrote asking if such a plan would meet her approbation. She replied that she supposed there was no other way.

It was a murky afternoon when he called, and large flakes of snow had begun to fall. He carried the letters down in a brown paper, to which was fastened a wood and wire handle. They made a package the size of a large bureau drawer. He was not used to being seen on the street lurking merchandise and was much mortified at meeting a number of his acquaintances. It was the enormous bulk that distressed him. He was ushered into the little parlor where he had sat with Miss Hildreth so often. A bright fire blazed on the hearth, contrasting pleasantly with the cheerless scene without. Miss Hildreth was standing before the fireplace, her face lighted by the flame. She heard Mr. Reburn enter, but did not turn her head. She was dressed becomingly and looked very pretty. He felt like an adventurer who would sue him for breach of promise. He could not assume a proper dignity carrying some twenty pounds of letters. He was embarrassed.

He cleared his throat to announce his presence, and she turned her beautiful eyes upon him. Something told him that he—they had been making fools of themselves. He resolved upon an explanation, but could not remember the cause of their quarrel. Dropping the bulky package, he stepped forward, seized her hand and said in a low voice:
"Mae, forgive me!"

"Forgiveness was easy, but what do with forty pounds of letters was a different matter. They finally occurred to sit before the fire and feed them to the flames. For two hours they tossed in package after package till all were consumed.

And now they have begun to accumulate another batch.

Where the Flowers Came From.
There was a teacher, teaching in a very poor neighborhood, said a New York settler, who had seen some very daily gifts of flowers from one of her pupils, a ragged little boy. The flowers were of all sorts, sometimes costly, sometimes simple, but all of them were somewhat faded. One day the boy brought the teacher a great bouquet of mauve orchids. To be sure, they were much wilted, but none the less it could be seen that they had once cost a great deal of money. The puzzled teacher as she took them said:
"Jimmy, where do you get all these flowers that you give me? You don't steal them, I hope?"
"Oh, no, ma'am, the youngest answered; 'father's an ash man.'"
